Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.From the pulls of romantic love to the perplexities of religious beliefs, how does one man make sense of his life's trajectory? Such is the mandate for Owen Mohr, a college professor whose troubled psyche is finally winning out. And he soon discovers that the only way to reclaim it is to revisit his own life story, one chapter at a time. MOHR NEVERMORE, the debut work of literary fiction in a series by Merv Daub, is a fascinating, reflective foray into the circumstances that make a man, casting a thought-provoking new light on the role of the hero in modern man. A more philosophical Harry Angstrom in John Updike's RABBIT series, Owen Mohr has crafted an existence that should suit him fine. An accomplished university lecturer with perfect companion in a French girlfriend he calls the Muff, the good professor should be more than content. However, his increasingly acute panic attacks render this all but impossible. Reluctantly driven to banish them, Mohr surreptitiously arranges to meet a psychologist colleague named Luther under the guise of...
