It is one of the buzzwords of today's society and there is almost no faculty or perspective left out, which examined creativity and came to the result that it is either already inherent in their area or necessary. While creativity was mostly aligned with arts in the past it is today often associated with innovation in many different domains. To get some more insights, I have talked to many people. Among these 'interviews' was one conversation group consisting of ten very different people such as students, entrepreneurs, managers, consultants and creatives. This conversation was held in the hotel Intercontinental in Wellington, lasted for approximately four hours and will be used as the groundwork for this paper. 40 pp. Englisch.
