Excerpt: . . . conduct surveys. To assist in continuing education, CMS develops a limited number of courses for ongoing training and provides other training materials. Supervisory Reviews: States may design a supervisory review process for deficiencies cited during surveys, although CMS does not require them to do so. In July 2003, we recommended that CMS require states to have a minimum quality-assurance process that includes a review of a sample of survey reports below the level of actual harm to assess the appropriateness of scope and severity levels cited and help reduce 24 CMS did not instances of understated quality-of-care problems. 25 implement this recommendation. State Agency Practices and Policies: State survey agencies practices, including those on citing deficiencies and addressing pressure from the industry or others, are largely left to the discretion of state survey agencies. In the past, we reported that in one state, CMS officials had 26 If a state agency fails to found surveyors were not citing all deficiencies. cite all deficiencies associated with noncompliance, nursing home deficiencies are understated on the survey record. CMS can identify or monitor states for systematic noncitation practices through reviews of citation patterns, informal feedback from state surveyors, state 27 performance reviews, and federal monitoring surveys (discussed below). CMS also gives states latitude in defining their IDR process. 24 See GAO-03-561. 25 CMS commented on the importance of quality-assurance processes and noted it had already incorporated such reviews into CMS regional offices reviews of the state performance standards. However, the agency did not require states to initiate an ongoing process that would evaluate the appropriateness of the scope and severity of documented deficiencies, as...
